Bringing Seasons out of the closet

By Brian Lee

I have a confession to make — I like Seasons in the Sun.

It's a lonely thing to say publicly because it only sold 13 million copies and is the biggest selling single by a Canadian.

Ever.

But it's a song people hide their fondness of for fear of ridicule.

According to the liner notes in Terry Jacks' recently released retrospective CD, people either loved or hated the song since its 1973 release.

"One DJ in New York (who didn't like the record and was tired of getting so many requests for it) decided to have a contest.

"If more people hated the record than liked it, he would throw it off the Empire State Building.

"If more people liked it, he would personally cover his car with records and drive around New York for a week.

"Later, this DJ was credited for having the first vinyl rooftop."

Around here, Jacks is better known for trying to pass off his Fruit of the Looms for proper swim attire at the Pender pool.

But I was lucky enough to have a sister six years older than me.

Not only did that mean girls old enough to have boobs occasionally dropped by the house, it meant my first experience with music was angsty 1970s teen girl pop.

And the first song that survived my developing memory was Seasons.

Up until that point, music had been the Carol Burnett Show theme or hits from my grandpa's accordion.

Seasons was different.

To my infant mind, the song contained a profound mystery.

I fixed on the album cover for clues and for 40 years I held that image.

But in researching Jacks for the story on page 14, nothing I found matched what I had imprinted.

This was Pender Harbour before cable, so I guessed my sister probably didn't get the third copy off the press.

Sure enough, after some lengthy internet sleuthing, I found it.

The album was a 1976 K-Tel compilation called Terry Jacks and The Poppy Family:

I distinctly recall puzzling over the expressions of the pretty lady and the guy with cotton candy hair who was missing so many shirt buttons.

With Seasons scratching away on our old turntable, I pondered what drama so concerned them.

Despite the sad musical clues and theories gleaned from Gunsmoke plots, I never solved the riddle.

Album covers must have been my thing at the time because the other record I remember fixating on was Kiss's Love Gun:

I didn't solve that one either.

It ain't real if it's not in the Spiel.

Town hall meeting focuses community frustration over DMP

Over 300 people packed into the Pender Harbour Community Hall on May 2 for a town hall meeting to gather input on the controversial dock management plan for Pender Harbour.

The meeting was hosted by the P. H. Advisory Council and the P. H. and District Chamber of Commerce who have combined efforts to form a "dock management plan working group."

The working group aims to help inform residents about the DMP while organizing a unified response to the province, including circulating a petition opposing the draft document.

The meeting was moderated by Sean McAllister with dozens of attendees taking to the mike to voice a variety of concerns related to the DMP and to what many see as a "bigger issue."

"If I don't like the services my provincial or federal government provides, I can help unelect them," said David Pritchard, former owner of Fisherman's Resort in Garden Bay.

"I don't vote for the Sechelt Band and they are totally unaccountable to us. I understand the background of this but the overriding issue for me is really the constitutionality of this and I hope that it will be challenged very seriously if we go much further."

Some speakers asked how or to whom they could donate money to aid in the opposition to the plan.

Len Lee of the chamber of commerce said the working group has enough funds for current activities.

Steve Luchkow, president of the P. H. Advisory Council, ended the meeting by asking that if people wanted to offer support, they could become members of the chamber of commerce and the advisory council.

A petition opposing the DMP "due to the lack of meaningful consultation with the residents and property owners of Pender Harbour" has been circulated widely since the town hall meeting on May 2.

The petition had to be submitted by May 20 at which time it contained approximately 2,000 signatures.

The DMP working group hosts a website with information about the DMP as well as a list of questions compiled from a number of meetings on the subject at www.pender-harbourdockplan.com.

A panel discussion planned for May 20 was to include MLA Nicholas Simons, MP John Weston and SIB Chief Calvin Craigan but was cancelled after Craigan and the SIB council were called to a meeting in Victoria on that day.

Local greenskeeper off to U.S. Open

Local greenskeeper Jason Haines is off to the U.S. Open this month as part of that golf tournament's 150-person maintenance crew.

Haines, the golf course superintendent at the Pender Harbour Golf Course, said he was accepted as a volunteer at the June 18-21 tournament.

It will be the first time the U.S. Open has been held in the Pacific Northwest, taking place at Chambers Bay Golf Course, overlooking Puget Sound in Tacoma.

"The golfers tee off really early and this course has no trees on it so you can't have any maintenance staff on it because the noise isn't good for TV," said Haines.

"So they need to have a ton of people so that, by the time the sun comes up, everything's done." Haines will work shifts of 3 to 6 a.m. and then return for the night shift from 6 to 9 p.m.

"I suspect I won't be doing anything too glamorous — probably filling divots and raking sandtraps," said Haines.

"The more specialized jobs like water management and mower operations will probably be set aside for the staff there because it takes months to become efficient at that."

Haines will arrive at Chambers Bay four days before the tournament begins to train and get acquainted with the course.

PHSS class builds submersible 'robot' in new stewardship course

Fresh off his award-winning science program delving into the "Plight of the Sakinaw Salmon," Pender Harbour Secondary School science teacher Jay Walls looks to have another hit on his hands.

Walls has created the curriculum for a new province-wide course dubbed Coastal Ecological Stewardship 11.

It was accepted by School District 46 in March of this year and is now available to any school in the province to teach.

Walls' Science and Technology 11 class was the test for this new course and it looks to be going well.

On May 19 at the Madeira Park government wharf, Walls and his students conducted a successful test of a remotely-operated submersible "robot" they built.

The robot is self-propelled via three bilge pump motors and carries a camera to record the underwater action.

It is hoped the unit will eventually transmit a live video feed back to the operator but so far it lacks an HDMI cable to make that possible.

"The camera has WiFi but it doesn't transmit through the water," said Walls.

Rick King of Madeira Marina donated the bilge pump motors and searchlight joystick controls needed to build the submersible unit.

Walls also received an $800 grant from the lieutenant-governor's "Stewards of the Future" initiative to fund field trips for the course.

With the assistance of Lee Ann Ennis and the Ruby Lake Lagoon Society, the class has also made a number of field trips including a recent visit to Egmont with divers for a mass identification of marine life.

Jay Walls' (top photo, right) PHSS Science and Technology 11 class recently tested their submersible remotely operated 'robot' in the waters off Madeira Park. Powered by a 12-volt car battery, the submersible carries a GoPro camera and is controlled using marine searchlight joystick controls.

WATER USE RESTRICTIONS

Effective May 1, the Sunshine Coast Regional District has declared stage 1 outdoor water use restrictions for all regional water customers of the Sunshine Coast.

Sprinklers, soaker hoses, irrigation systems and other watering devices can be used for outdoor watering according to the stage 1 schedule below:

• For even addresses, outdoor watering is allowed Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday from 7 to 9 a.m. and from 7 to 9 p.m.

• For odd addresses outdoor water use is allowed on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday from 7 to 9 a.m. and from 7 to 9 p.m.

Hand-held hoses with shut-off devices can be used anytime for watering trees, shrubs, flowers or vegetables.

Rain sensors are now required on all irrigation systems to prevent watering in the rain.

Drip irrigation systems, including micro-drip systems are exempt from the watering restrictions because they are water-conserving systems.

VEHICULAR VANDALISM

On the evening of May 7, a vehicle entered the school field of Madeira Park Elementary and tore up the grass.

A piece of the suspect vehicle was left at the scene and has been turned over to police for examination

RCMP are continuing to investigate and ask anyone with information to contact Sunshine Coast RCMP.

BREAK AND ENTER

On May 1, a woman reported that her seasonal cabin in the Egmont area was broken into over the winter.

Several lawn and garden tools were stolen, and multiple windows were smashed.

Police encourage owners of seasonal residences to remove valuables if possible.

It is also wise to have a neighbour check their properties periodically if it will be unoccupied for extended periods of time.

The sooner a break-in or theft is noticed, the better the chances are of gathering evidence and identifying a suspect.

Many might not realize that winter storms eat away much of the man-made sandy beach at Ruby Lake's Dan Bosch Park. Each year, contractor Glen Vincent is tasked by the SCRD to spread four truckloads of sand to cover the exposed rocks and debris to return the popular swimming spot to a sandy beach.

It is also his third in a row.

Matt "Grizz" Kroetsch came third in the open final and also won the masters (over-30) event, making it the first time a competitor has made the podium in two categories.

The top three in the women's final all hailed from Calgary, with last year's second-place finisher, Victoria Waddington, taking the top spot.

For the third year in a row, North Vancouver's Kevin Reimer has topped the podium in the 'open' category at Attack of Danger Bay.

It was an all-Calgary podium for the women, with last year's second-place finisher Victoria Waddington taking the top spot at ADB 14.

Draft dock management plan

Frank Mauro, Area A Director

As reported last month, the comment period for the draft plan has been extended.

The province has posted a list of frequently asked questions and responses on the provincial website.

That site is somewhat difficult to navigate and the list can most easily be accessed on websites of either the Pender Harbour Advisory Council or the Sechelt Indian Band.

Also the province and the Shishálh Nation are working to arrange another information meeting to be held on June 13 to further answer questions and listen to comments.

I understand the deadline for comments will be extended for two weeks past that date.

A delegation from the Pender Harbour Chamber of Commerce made a presentation at the SCRD Board meeting on May 14 stating that the plan had been drafted without input from the residents and requesting support for consultation.

The board passed a motion to write a letter to the province requesting, "a consultation process that includes full meaningful discussion and consideration of comments from Pender Harbour residents before moving forward with the Pender Harbour Dock Management Plan."

The motion is in keeping with the knowledge that the SCRD has no jurisdiction over docks and was not involved in the formulation of the DMP or its implementation.

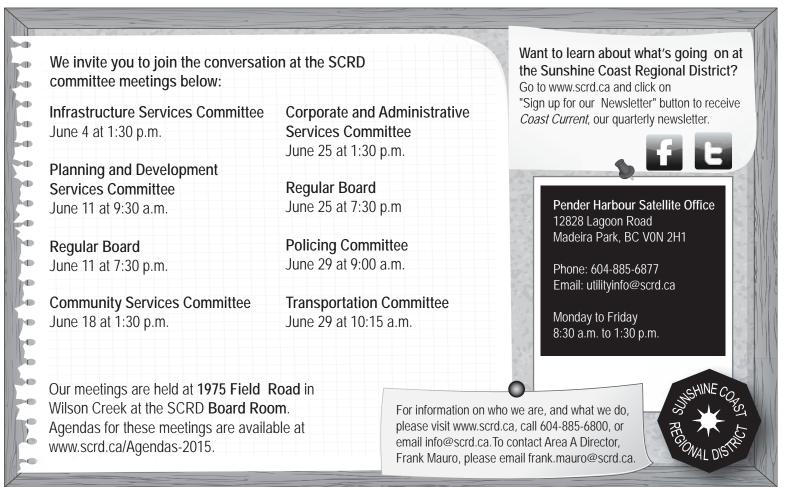

The SCRD board is committed to promoting public engagement, open communication, and due process in resolving the situation to the benefit of all concerned.

I encourage residents get as much information as possible by reading the plan, reviewing the answers to the FAQ, getting clarification at the upcoming information meeting and submitting comments to the province before the end of the comment period.

STRATEGIC PLANNING

The SCRD has started its strategic planning process.

The purpose of a strategic plan is to focus energy and resources to ensure that board and SCRD staff are working toward common goals and to assess and adjust the organization's direction in response to a changing environment.

It will be this board's guiding document for the next four years.

A yearly review to assess progress and validate goals is part of the process.

The exercise will result in a plan which will be used to communicate the organization's goals, the actions needed to achieve those goals, and all of the other elements developed during the planning exercise.

The goal is to come out with:

- Clear and attainable priorities that reflect the challenges and opportunities facing the Sunshine Coast over the next few years;
- Goals and objectives that build on the progress that has been achieved over the past few years, and
- A plan prioritizing actions identified in other SCRD documents like the parks and recreation services master plan, regional water plan and the integrated transportation study.

Early direction by the board has been to refocus on the core regional district mandates such as solid waste, water supply, land use planning and parks and recreation.

The cost of these services forms a large portion of the SCRD budget and merits close attention.

The board also receives requests from constituents for services in addition to the mandated ones.

SCRD directors must be sensitive to these requests and remain open to lobbying for them while remaining aware of the financial and overhead costs of doing so.

I can be reached at (604) 740-1451 or by email at Frank.Mauro@ scrd.ca.

Starfish on the Beach: Terry Jacks celebrates 40 'Seasons'

By Brian Lee (Images courtesy of Terry Jacks and Regenerator Records)

It's been 40 years since Seasons in the Sun was the hottest record in the world.

Last month, Terry Jacks released a 40 song CD celebrating the anniversary of one of the most popular songs of all time.

It sold over 12 million copies — the best-selling single by a Canadian.

Jacks grew up in Vancouver but has lived in Madeira Park for 25 years.

He came here for the first time in 1967 and returned often, staying at Lowes Resort to go fishing.

Then, as now, Pender Harbour provided an escape from both the city and the music industry.

He never went looking for fame, he just liked making records.

"Records to me were like pictures," says Jacks.

"I didn't really want to go out and perform, I just wanted to make these little pictures because they meant so much to me."

Besides Seasons, Jacks has scored other number 1 hits, namely Concrete Sea, Where Evil Grows and Which Way You Goin' Billy?

He has produced dozens of artists including Nana Mouskouri, The Beach Boys and Chilliwack.

He has taken on BC's mighty pulp and paper industry and won.

But he is still best known for a song written from the perspective of a close friend dying of leukemia.

Seasons in the Sun was adapted from a translated version of Belgian folksinger Jacques Brel's Le Moribond.

Brel is reputed to have written the song in a Tangiers whorehouse.

"That record haunted me for years," Jacks says.

"It was a funny song about an old man dying of a broken heart because his best friend is screwing his wife.

"He said goodbye to his best friend. He said goodbye to his priest.

"And then he said goodbye to his cheating wife, Francoise."

Jacks was golfing with a friend who broke the news that he had six months to live.

"I couldn't believe it. He was probably beating me — he was a really good golfer — but he was dead in four months."

"I was one of the first people he told and I thought, 'Golly, he'd have to tell me and he'd have to tell his girlfriend and he have to tell his Dad."

Jacks was already riding high in the music industry.

He'd just gone solo after ending his marital and musical partnership with Susan Pesklevitz and their band The Poppy Family.

The Poppy Family was a pretty good gig.

In only a few years, they had collected four Junos and sold over three million copies of their most successful record, Which Way You Going Billy?.

But, it wasn't long before Jacks scored his first solo number 1 hit with Concrete Sea.

Then he followed it up with a recording of a song that had "haunted him for years."

As soon as Jacks finished Seasons in The Sun, he left for Hawaii.

On the way to the airport, he dropped a record off with Vancouver DJ Red Robinson.

While Jacks was in the taxi to Richmond, the song came on the radio.

"This is the debut of Terry Jacks' new single Seasons in the Sun," boomed Robinson in his distinctive baritone.

"You heard it first on CKWX." From his liner notes:

"Terry's heart sank. He thought there was too much bass on it."

The song exploded and Jacks had to cut his trip short to make record deals for markets outside Canada.

"It was sort of a left -field song
— it didn't really fit, you know?

"There wasn't a category for it and that's one of the reasons it sold so much — it worked in all the formats," says Jacks.

"Little kids liked it, older people liked it and it just went crazy."

On March 2, 1974, Seasons knocked Barbara Streisand's The Way We Were from the number one spot on the Billboard Top 100 and stayed there for three weeks.

It would go on to finish runnerup to Streisand's as the top song of 1974 and is still one of fewer than 40 singles to have sold 10 million copies worldwide.

Jacks wasn't supposed to pursue a career in music.

He was the son of a doctor with expectations that he would go on to UBC and study architecture.

Jacks grew up playing golf and had enough talent to consider a career as a golf pro.

He also grew up listening to (continued next page)

"His music was so vibrant and it was fresh rock and roll," says Jacks.

"I went home crying the day he died. Don McLean sang The Day the Music Died, but that's when it was born for me.

"That's when I started writing these stupid little songs."

Unlike Holly's music, many of Jacks' songs, like Seasons, are sad.

He blames Lynne, a girlfriend who dumped him in high school, for his melancholic inspiration.

"I was 16, she was 15 and we planned the names of our kids and everything," says Jacks.

"She just dumped me bad because I wasn't going to continue on to university.

"She devastated me. It left me with a deep hurt and showed up in a lot of my songs. I picked up on emotions and then I'd write these fictitious stories."

The B side of Seasons in the Sun was one of those sad songs but it was meant to be a dog so as not to compete with Seasons for airplay.

Put the Bone In is a sentimental song about a young woman asking a butcher for a bone for her dog which has just been hit by a car.

The song carried an obvious double entendre and featured drunken members of the Vancouver Canucks singing back up vocals.

It isn't the only song of Jacks' with an ambiguous meaning.

He says he once sent pharmaceutical company Pfizer a copy of You Keep Me Up for consideration for their Viagra marketing campaign.

"They said they loved it but it was too risque for them and wasn't 'medicinal' enough," laughs Jacks.

After Seasons in the Sun infected the planet, everything changed.

He was the first Canadian to have an international, multi-million selling platinum single.

He won two Junos in 1974 for the best-selling single and male vocalist of the year.

The next year, he won them again.

"In 1974 and 1975, I won male vocalist of the year at the Junos and it was one of my biggest thrills because I beat out Lightfoot and Burton Cummings, who are both incredible singers."

He cut record deals for just about every country on the planet and became a bigger star overseas than he was at home.

But Jacks' story of songwriting royalties is an all too common example of the pitfalls that can befuddle a career in music.

Though he rewrote much of the song, including the tremolo-drenched opening riff, he didn't receive songwriting credit for his biggest hit.

Brel's original French version, Le Moribond, was translated into English by American poet and singer Rod McKuen.

McKuen's version still follows the story of a man lying on his deathbed, singing of his cheating wife and best friend while Jack's version has a completely different story line.

Though Jacks earns recordingartist royalties from sales of the record, Brel and McKuen take a big cut owning the songwriting royalties.

"I was very stupid. I was 28 years old and I just didn't give a damn

— the record companies were giving me all this money because the record was going up.

"So I didn't get a lawyer and do all the shit I probably would have done today."

"Brel said I should have got a third of it but I didn't really care then.

"I was single, man. Can you imagine being 29 or 30, all the women in the world, any place you wanted to go and a number 1 record?

"Golly, I had no time for making more money."

But it did have its downside.

"Everything I did was either too much like Seasons or not enough like Seasons," says Jacks.

"In a way it screwed my career and in another way, it opened a lot of doors for me."

In the mid-1980s, Jacks quit music and focused his efforts and celebrity on the environmental movement.

"I checked into some of these pulp mills and none of them were following their permits and the government was saying, 'We have the highest fines and the most stringent regulations in North America.'

"But they weren't being fined and they weren't following the rules and the government would just say something like, 'Well, they're doing their best.'

"Well, when I'm speeding, I

By the mid-1980s, Terry Jacks had stepped away from the music industry to focus on protecting the BC Coast. He formed an organization called the Environmental Watch. "It was watching what industry was doing and watching what the government wasn't doing."

can't tell the cop that I'm doing my best, so how come we have this double standard?

"And that's what hit the front page of the [Vancouver] Sun."

Jacks ended up taking the government and Howe Sound Pulp and Paper to court.

He says his environmental stance is one of the reasons he hasn't always been accepted on the Sunshine Coast.

And he thinks that's unfair.

"I wasn't trying to shut them down and kill off jobs but the big boys would tell their soldiers — the people who worked for them — that 'Terry Jacks is trying to close us down.'

"That's bullshit. I just wanted them to spend more money on making paper that is not bright, bright white, like they said they could."

The fight exhausted him and after 12 years of fighting industry, he pulled back — but not before being recognized by the United Nations with an award for environmental activism.

"That was one of the highlights of my life but I donated a lot of my life to it and it's a big burnout, man."

Buddy Holly

Terry Jacks is a lifelong fan of Buddy Holly. Not only did he name his daughter Holly (he considered "Buddy" but it sounded too masculine), he named a dog after Holly, wrote a song named Holly and, when he wrote the Poppy Family hit Which Way You Goin' Billy, he originally wrote it with "Buddy" in place of "Billy."

He's also covered at least two of Holly's hits. According to the liner notes for Jacks' recently released 40 song retrospective, Paul McCartney, who owns Buddy Holly's publishing catalogue, considers Jacks' 1973 cover of I'm Gonna Love You Too as his favourite.

Along the way, he purchased Seasons in the Sun, a 32-foot Uniflite that he's taken to just about "every cove between here and Alaska."

Jacks claims he's spent seven of the last 30 years aboard his boat.

He sold it a few years ago to fellow Madeira Parker, Murray Warman.

Now he hops in a canoe to hit up nearby oyster beds.

rather live that's this close to the city," he says with his trademark enthusiasm.

"I can launch my canoe and be back with my limit of oysters in half an hour."

Jacks made a pile of cash but after three marriages and a life lived, he lives in a modest home overlooking the Strait of Georgia.

He doesn't mind.

He once had a 5,000-square-foot house with all the amenities one might expect for a recording star but doesn't miss it one bit.

Jacks says his main ambition right now is to "swim my ass off."

Taped to his refrigerator door is what he calls the best thing he's ever written:

"I wish everyone could get rich and famous and do everything they ever dreamed of, so they could see that it's not the answer."

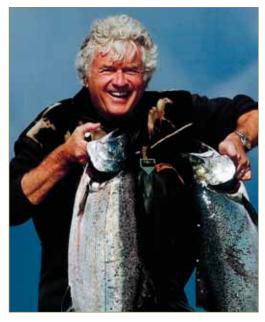

There's an album of new music he's been working on but he's been there before and isn't distracted by it.

He takes more pride in the accomplishments of the daughter he raised here in Pender Harbour.

Holly Jacks was the focus of a recent Harbour Spiel article (December 2014) about her equestrian accomplishments.

Since then she has been named to the Canadian equestrian team attending the 2016 Olympics in Brazil.

Though that hints at a future trip to Brazil, Jacks will say he prefers to spend his time in Pender Harbour or his recently finished home on the north shore of Haida Gwaii.

"It's small little place but beautiful. I look across and I can see the mountains of Prince of Wales Island in Alaska.

"You can put your crab pot out on the beach at low tide and when the tide goes out again, you just walk out and pick the ones you want."

But Madeira Park is still his home.

"Where else would I rather live? I can't think of any place in the world and I have travelled all over it," he says buoyantly.

"All over the world — and I can't think of a better place."

Marlene Gough's gentle soul wafted away on the wings of angels May 1, 2015.

Born March 4, 1942, Marlene's early years were spent with her family in the Pender Harbour area.

She moved to the Comox Valley where she resided in care homes and attended programs for the developmentally disabled.

Gough later moved to Victoria where she lived a full and happy life with her beloved friends in the very special care of her "forever buddy" Sadie, who mourns her passing.

Gough is predeceased by her parents, Frank and Gertie Gough.

She is survived and held in the hearts of her eight siblings: Frank (Diane), Gordie (Sue), Dorothy, Carolyn, Mike, Sandy (Mark), Doug and Evan (Sharon), plus many nieces and nephews who knew her childlike spirit as they grew up.

There was a celebration of life at her sister Carolyn's home in Comox on May 30.

A very special community

Dear Editor

Linda and I went to the Pender Harbour Advisory Council and Chamber of Commerce meeting today (May 2), regarding the dock management plan, negotiated between the provincial government and the Sechelt Indian Band.

I have to say, having lived in some pretty nice communities around the world, we were so proud of our Pender Harbour community friends today.

I didn't do a count, but it looked like 300 Pender Harbourites attended, not far short of the size of the entire Sechelt Band on the peninsula and many more than the band families within 15 kilometres of us here in Pender Harbour.

A lot of the Harbourites were clearly distressed and upset by the proposals.

A number were angry at what they saw as a provincial government sell-out of their rights and freedoms as Canadians.

A surprising number saw it as a test case for First Nation rights over much of the province.

But overwhelmingly, Linda and I saw it as a demonstration of how decent, respectful, intelligent, thoughtful and aware this precious Pender Harbour community is.

There are very neat, caring people in this community who do not want to be pitted against the band and its precious aspirations.

Harbourites have their own precious aspirations that today they demonstrated with dignity, intelligence and a lot of style.

Linda and I are proud to be part of this community.

Regarding the draft Pender Harbour dock management plan

The following letter was emailed to Premier Christy Clark and cc'ed to the Harbour Spiel.

Madam Premier,

I am shocked and deeply disappointed at your actions through the Ministry of Forests, Lands and Natural Resource Operations at the draft Pender Harbour dock management plan.

As a stakeholder, this plan should be scrapped.

Jacqueline Cavill's letter of March 18, 2015 states:

"The province has been involved in discussions with the Shishálh Nation regarding docks in Pender Harbour over the past several months."

This is not true.

There has been a moratorium on new docks for approximately 12 years due to discussions with the Shishálh Nation.

On Sept. 15, 2012, my "specific permission" for private moorage was revoked seven months after receiving it.

The reason given was that it was to facilitate discussions with the Shishálh First Nation.

I was given the choice of tearing down my dock that has been in place since 1992 or accepting a "licence of occupation" for five years at an additional cost, even though I had just paid for the revoked specific permission

The contact person at the ministry was Andrea Cowgill, who never returned my phone calls or my Realtor's calls and emails.

Why?

The interests of the taxpayer are trumped by the Sechelt Nation.

We were provided an open house with handouts and business cards of the Shishálh nation's rights and title department for applications for development, archaeological assessments and general inquiries.

Chief Calvin Craigan was quoted by Mike Hager (Globe and Mail, Jan. 22, 2015) that the Shishálh First Nation:

"... will have jurisdiction over the foreshore of the Sunshine Coast, returned back to us soon, after the provincial government ratifies a reconciliation agreement that includes a new plan to manage any moorage in the Sechelt Peninsula."

The open house presentation was a handout and poster-sized printouts of the handout were on the walls.

There was no introduction of those who were there to answer questions from the government or Shishálh nation and only four hours to figure out what the DMP was and then make an informed comment or question on any slip provided.

You must scrap this Pender Harbour dock management plan.

Then start over with a proper consultation with the stakeholders — including the entire Sunshine Coast.

There is no scientific basis for the zones dividing up Pender Harbour.

As a matter of fact, there is no evidence provided from any study that these proposed guidelines are the best management practices for the Sunshine Coast.

There are no references to any regulations, laws, definitions, studies or sources to this draft Pender Harbour dock management plan.

For example, the draft definition of "riparian" means the vegetated transitional area between terrestrial and aquatic ecosystems, and is delineated from the natural boundary upland for a distance of 15 metres.

What regulation is this?

It certainly is not "Riparian Areas Regulation, B.C. Reg. 376/2004, S.1 (1)" in which riparian area is defined as a "streamside protection" and enhancement area.

This proposed draft Pender Harbour Dock Management Plan should have been called the Sechelt Peninsula Dock Management Plan.

Chief Calvin Craigen wants to manage all government, land and foreshore within the Shishálh Nation land claims' intent.

As a citizen, landowner, taxpayer, and stakeholder, what are our rights?

Apparently, not to be part of any negotiations.

I did not come to Pender Harbour to be told by the Shishálh Nation what I can or cannot do and what costs I have to possibly pay to meet their requirements.

Ms. Clark, your ministry is destroying property values and a way of life on the Sechelt Peninsula.

As it stands, you are forcing upon us land management by the Shishalh Nation whom we have no rights with.

Stop what you are doing or buy us out.

We may have to go to the courts, but one thing for sure is our votes will

Is Stanley Park next for the Squamish Nation?

I do not want to be a guest on my land as Chief Calvin Craigan refers to us as.

I want to be a neighbour governed by a government that I can elect and which represents all of us equally.

Province is responsible for 'co-management' mess

Dear Editor

On the heels of the Supreme Court decision earlier this year giving First Nations west of Williams Lake full control over continuously occupied tribal lands, BC Premier Christy Clark announced a changed approach to land claims, now apparently tied to shared management of Crown resources rather than outright transfer of ownership.

Nobody should be blaming just the Sechelt Band or the SCRD for the provincial/Shishálh nation Pender dock co-management plan, although both seem to be operating in the dark.

Victoria can can take full credit for the mess.

Hapless BC bureaucrats had the goofy idea that corporate giveaways like "run-of the river electricity generation partnerships" could replace real land claims negotiations.

Nobody considered that the giveaways in the Pender dock scheme would be the legal democratic rights built into the planning process including public hearings and grassroots community involvement.

I cornered one government rep among several in the Harbour over the May holiday intent on assessing why the government's co-management trial balloon exploded.

He'd had an earful from the angry folks mostly saying it is unworkable.

Although the Shishálh nation says it has no interest in privately owned land, this assertion pointedly ignores the complex coastal interface and overlap of where people live, how they make a living, and democratic power over environmental protection and decision making.

Management of Pender Harbour is beyond the human, scientific, technical, and capital resources of the small Sechelt band which has been largely absent from the area for nearly a century except for recent salmonid enhancement on Sakinaw Lake.

Any semblance of management would require paying new taxes and fees to finance a set of local experts.

Unless the numerous legally required citizen planning safeguards continue in place, any co-management approach will blur meaningful democratic distinctions between private and public property while isolating political control from the ballot box.

Plunking the makings of a longhouse on Francis Point Park, which is a privately owned parcel leased to the province, doesn't sit well with Pender folk who see it as a sign of worse to come.

Now the dock plan threatens to remove or curtail riparian rights of local waterfront owners, a clear indication of where this idiocy is all headed.

Official community and regional plans are embedded and interwoven within an existing context of Crown-negotiated management arrangements for water resources, waste management, and resource extraction; all critical elements of the Pender economy.

Adding First Nations land claims to a phony co-management scheme has little chance of doing much more than raising the political temperature.

To top it off, it may be illegal if the Pender Band is correct in saying the Sechelt claim hasn't been certified by the federal government.

JUNE ASTROLOGY

GEMINI: MAY 21 – JUNE 21

Geminis are butterflies by nature, flitting from one attraction to the next. They're easily bored but have lively, stimulating minds and can be witty and charming. Being the planet-ruler of this sign, Mercury will be in Gemini's corner this month, boosting rewards in the sphere of business. If you're planning a business move or considering purchasing a home, this is your month. Mercury says, "Go all in." Favourable numbers to guide your decisions: four and 17.

Those born under the sign of the crab value security, enjoy the safety and comfort of familiar surroundings and activities, and don't like surprises. Unfortunately for them, the planet-exalt of this sign, Jupiter, will vacation this month. We all know what that means — so watch out for rabbits. Frequent recitations of the Cancerian-suited mantra, "Om Shanti," will deliver comfort during this period of upheaval. A serendipitous benefit will its influence on your sex life.

ARBUTUS TREE DECLINE

The arbutus, often referred to as the madrona, is a native species to British Columbia. Recently many arbutus in BC and down the coast to southern California are showing signs of stress. The problem was first reported in urban areas in California but it appears are shed following development of that arbutus of all ages and sizes and locations are affected. However the larger and oldest Arbutus show the highest rates of mortality.

Causes of arbutus decline

Abiotic stresses can increase the probability of an arbutus becoming susceptible to disease or damage:

- Urbanization
 - o Including reduced growing space o vehicular and marine traffic o pollutants
- Climate change
- Possible suppression of wildfires
- Root disturbance and damage

The biotic stresses

Arbutus trees are host more than 21 fungal species of pathogens. Many of these fungi result in leaf spots. The majority of these leaf spots develop in the fall and winter, and the leaves the new growth. However, if the leaves discolour and drop prematurely, this could suggest a more serious problem. such as root rot or canker disease.

Ways to help

- Minimize human influence around the arbutus trees
 - o Avoid disrupting roots and aboveground portions of trees.
 - o Do not prune
 - o Do not irrigate established plants (encourages surface rooting, which is short-lived and considerably less resilient than deep rooting.)
 - o Do not irrigate in the summer
- Plant more arbutus

Pender Harbour Reading Centre invites all to thank the Whites

Submitted

When people think of the gems of Pender Harbour — places to hike and paddle, music festivals and art crawls — they may not be aware of our two literary gems.

The publishing house appropriately called "Harbour" and our local library named the Pender Harbour Reading Centre.

And the two are very good friends.

Harbour Publishing has been donating their books to the Reading Centre for over 40 years — that amounts to over 500 books.

The reading centre, having no government support, relies on these donations to provide members with reading access to all sorts of topics — many related to local history, including biographies, humour and poetry.

To say a special thank you to Mary and Howard White of Harbour Publishing, the reading centre will host an old-fashioned garden party on Wednesday, June 24.

It will take place at 1 p.m. at the Reading Centre and the P. H. School of Music, with catering generously provided by Doug Davis.

Howard will speak at 1 p.m. with the garden party (and more) to follow.

The entire community is enthusiastically invited to this event.

All programs are drop-in and all are welcome!

P. H. LIVING HERITAGE SOCIETY

The P. H. Living Heritage Society is looking for maritime photos. In preparation for displays for Pender Harbour Days (July 10-12), we are seeking pre-1960 maritime photos related to Pender Harbour — fishing boats, pleasure boats, work boats, boat building and festivals.

We specifically wish to recognize the boat builders who played such an important role in the harbour. Do you have photos of a boat builder, a list of boats built and a brief biography?

If you have history to share, please call Cathy at (604) 883-0280 or use the contact form at www.penderharbourheritage.ca.

EGMONT COMMUNITY CLUB

Egmont Day is June 6 this year and promises to be the best one yet. Of course there will be the usual events with fantastic prizes like the kid's fishing derby but this year we also plan to have "Party Ponies" out of Roberts Creek with a petting zoo and pony rides.

The parade will start the festivities off from the Heritage Centre at 11 a.m. (meet at 10:30), and continue on to the park and the hall for games and treats and friends and fun. Don't miss it!

HARBOURSIDE FRIENDSHIPS

The Harbourside Friendships group meets at the Pender Harbour Community Hall every Thursday morning. Enjoy free coffee and cookies at 10:30 a.m. followed by the programs below. Hot lunch is served at noon for $10. For information, please call Cathy at (604) 885-1365.

June 4: Movie of the Month (TBA).

June 11: Alex Christian, our local Rotary Exchange Student will give a presentation about the year she spent in Denmark.

June 18: Join us for our armchair travels. Pia Sillem will present slides on a recent trip to Cuba.

June 25: "Dog Daze at the Lions Park!" Bring your pet and join us for a barbeque lunch at the Lions Park.

A personal story of cystic fibrosis

By Sandra McLean RN, BScN

Cystic fibrosis is the most common fatal genetic disease affecting Canadian children and young adults.

Despite massive leaps in treatments in very recent years, there is still no cure.

Cystic fibrosis has various effects in different body systems, the biggest impact being on the lungs and digestive systems.

Thick mucous lines the lungs and digestive system making it hard for CFers to breathe or digest and absorb nutrients.

Persistence of infections in the lungs over time leads to destruction of lung tissue function and eventually causes death in the majority of people who have cystic fibrosis.

Only a few may be lucky enough or eligible for a lung transplant that may add extra breathing room and time to their life.

A common complication caused by cystic fibrosis is difficulty in digesting fat and protein and the absorption of vitamins.

It is estimated that one in every 3,600 children born in Canada has cystic fibrosis.

In 2013, my husband and I were expecting our first child.

During an ultrasound to check on our baby's size the radiologist noticed an irregularity in our son's bowel.

This led to several further tests including an amniocentesis at 34 weeks' pregnancy that confirmed that our baby boy had cystic fibrosis.

We were (and still are in many ways) in complete shock.

However, we considered ourselves lucky to know this diagnosis before he was born, so that when Benjamin was delivered at BC Children's Hospital, a pediatric surgical team and neonatologists were ready for him in the delivery room.

He had a blockage and perforated bowel.

The blockage was caused by a thick mucous plug, called muconeum illeus and our son required urgent surgery (called an ostomy) at two days old

Ben was five and a half months old when the ostomy was reversed — he finally had a normal poop the old-fashioned way.

His father and I were never so thrilled to change a poopy diaper.

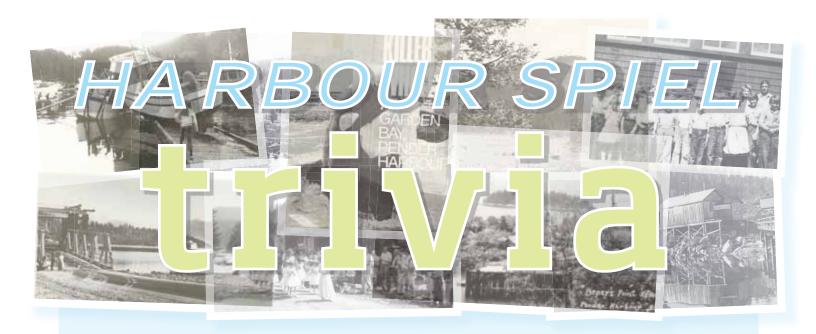

Ben is 20 months old now and leads a relatively healthy and normal toddler life with some extra considerations.

He takes a high-fat and high-salt diet and enzymes with every meal to help him digest and absorb nutrients.

He gets regular physical therapy, called chest physio, twice a day.

My husband and I are dedicated to doing whatever is required to give Ben a healthy, full life. That includes spreading the word and keeping the momentum in clinical research, care and a cure.

Visit www.cysticfibrosis.ca to learn more about cystic fibrosis and how you can help add tomorrows to a CFer's life.

P. H. Community School staff

Need a projector and a screen?

Is there a speaker system at the Community Hall and can I use it?

Where can I borrow a microphone?

As part of the continuing work of their "information and referral project," the Pender Harbour Community School is compiling an inventory of community-use equipment and other items.

Our goal is to have a comprehensive list of equipment that is available at the various venues and any items that organizations or individuals are willing to loan out, share or rent. Included in this inventory will be detailed terms and conditions of use.

Did you know the Pender Harbour Community School has a digital projector available for community use? Find out exactly what kind of projector it is, how you can go about renting it and what the fees are. We would like to have a listing like this for every piece of equipment available in our community.

We need your help to compile this information. Organizations who haven't yet had a chance to respond to our email can phone us with their details. Also, if you are an individual community member who has something you are willing to share, we would love to include that too.

Besides compiling a current inventory, we also want to identify needs within the community that are not met locally.

Let us know what kind of items you or your organization regularly needs but cannot find within the Pender Harbour area. If we find that different organizations are often looking for the same items, we can then look at ways of acquiring these items for the community.

We want this directory to be as comprehensive as possible. Please help us by filling out the information on the next page. You can email it to phcs@dccnet.com, drop it off at the community school or call Patti at (604) 883.2826.

Thank you in advance for helping us gather this information.

Remember to check out the online Community Resource Directory at www.pendercommunity.ca.

On the next page is what we need to know.

Feel the Boom at this year's blues fest

The big night at the annual Pender Harbour Blues Festivial is always the Saturday night concert at the Pender Harbour Community Hall.

This year's headline act, the Boom Booms, promise to raise that bar even higher.

The Boom Booms are an indie soul band from Vancouver consisting of brothers Aaron Ross (lead vocals) and Sean Ross (keys), Tom Van Deursen (guitar), Geordie Hart (bass), Richard Brinkman (drums) and Theo Vincent (percussion, drums).

The Georgia Straight described their music thusly:

Some of the tightest, smoothest, sexiest soul and funk produced in the city right now comes courtesy of six guys who all grew up within a few blocks of each other on Vancouver's East Side.

What makes for a great band? It's practice and the Boom Booms practically live on the road.

They've busked across Europe, performed in the Brazilian Amazon and Rio's famous "Casa Rosa."

They've made the 12,000-kilometre round trip from Vancouver to Panama touring in a Scamper RV and circumnavigated the United States twice in their yellow school bus.

The Boom Booms

The Boom Booms will get the Pender Harbour Community Hall pumping on June 6.

Being on the road a lot brings other benefits for musicians as well — they pick up musical influnces along the way.

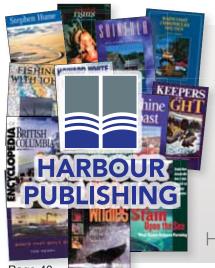

You can smell the road travelled in the The Boom Booms' 2011 Latin-laced debut album ¡Hot Rum!.

Their sophomore release with Grammy award-winning producer Chin Injeti (Eminem, Dr. Dre, Pink), Love Is Overdue, landed on Oct. 4 of last year. Love Is Overdue draws out the band's childhood influences of Bill Withers and Al Green.

Since April, these six guys have been touring in support of that album down the West Coast, across the southern U.S. and back up through Quebec and Ontario

On June 6, they'll be at the Pender Harbour Community Hall.

Tickets are $25 and available at Funky Finds or www.phblues.ca.

Celebrating BOOKS in the Harbour!

The Pender Harbour Reading Centre invites you to celebrate Harbour Publishing's generosity to the Reading Centre and the broader community.

WEDNESDAY JUNE 24 1–3PM

at the Pender Harbour Reading Centre and P. H. School of Music in Madeira Park

Howard White will speak at 1pm. Garden Party (and more) to follow.
